Courses in women's studies consider the roles and accomplishments of women in the past and the social, psychological, political, economic, and cultural forces influencing their present and future condition. The women’s studies curriculum addresses systems of oppression as they affect women: sexism, racism, classism, anti-Semitism and xenophobia, ageism, ableism, sizeism and heterosexism. The program shares the aim of extending human knowledge by examining traditional disciplines from a women's studies perspective and by pioneering research into new areas.

The department supports a variety of social and educational opportunities, including student organizations, forums, workshops, and research projects. Students are encouraged to take leadership roles in the development of special programs and to become actively involved with community women’s organizations and with related campus groups.

Admission to Major is granted by the department. Admission requirements are:
- a minimum of 32 earned semester credit hours.
- a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.00 (C).

Contact the department for application procedures.
